

Hon. David Sassoli
President of the European Parliament

Dear Mr. Sassoli,

Sadly, the EU institutions are once again being used to attack the cultural heritage of the Member States and its citizens' religious beliefs.

As you know, our Christian roots define our societies and the values on which are founded, and therefore they should be cherished and respected.

At the beginning of this important month, where Christians and most Europeans celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ in a series of religious and cultural events, we have seen the European Commission try to blur the significance of these dates in the name of inclusion.

Moreover, a so-called LGBTQ ambassador from the EU Parliament, Riccardo Simonetti, recently took part on shameful farce to disrespect Virgin Mary and the nativity of Jesus who made it to the front page of a German magazine.

The EU institutions cannot take part on these attacks to our cultural and religious heritage and should take action to protect them.

That is why I urge you to end any kind of collaboration with Riccardo Simonetti and to issue a statement to publicly apologise for all these attacks against Christianity.

I look forward to your prompt response as millions of Europeans expect from the EU institutions to defend our common history, our roots and our culture.

Sincerely yours,

Jorge Buxadé
